Won't Visit Chicago. But in Declining the Invitation of Cit'zens Gives

Them the Benefit of His Views on Sound Money. The Line of Battle Drawn.

The Forces of Safe Currency and Silver Monometalism.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Following is the text of President Cleveland's note to the invitation of Chicago business men to address a meeting here, as previously announced:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13, 1895.
To Messrs. Wm. T. BAKER, GEORGE W. SMITH, JOHN A. ROUSE, T. W. HARVEY, DAVID KELLY and HENRY ROBINSON:—I am much gratified by the exceedingly kind and complimentary invitation you have extended to me to address a meeting of Chicago business men to be held at a gathering in the interest of sound money and wholesome financial doctrine.

My attachment to this cause is so great and I know so well the hospitality and kindness of the people of Chicago, that my personal inclination is strongly in favor of accepting your interesting invitation; but my judgment and conscientious estimate of the proprieties of my official place obliges me to forgo the enjoyment of participating in the occasion you contemplate.

I hope, however, the event will mark the beginning of a movement and aggressive effort to stimulate and sustain the people's safe and prudent financial ideas. Nothing more important can engage the attention of patriotic citizens, because nothing is so vital to the welfare of our fellow country-men and to strength, prosperity and honor of our nation.

The sides of the question are important, those who appreciate its importance of this subject and those who ought to be the first to see impending danger should no longer remain indifferent or overconfident.

THE SOUND MONEY SENTIMENT

A broad in the land is to save as from mischief and disaster it must be crystallized and combined and made immediate and effective. The time is opportune, the fact that a vast number of one people with scant opportunity, thus far, to examine the question in all its aspects, have, nevertheless, been ingeniously pressed with specious suggestions, which in this time of misfortune and depression find willing listeners, prepared to give credence to a scheme which is plainly presented as a remedy for our unfortunate condition.

What is now needed more than anything else is a plain and simple presentation of the argument in favor of sound money. In other words, it is a time for the American people to reason together as to the best way to meet a crisis which will compromise their confidence of protection and safety only so long as its solvency is unassisted. Its honor unassisted and the soundness of its money unquestioned. These things are ill-exchanges for the illusions of a debased currency and groundless hopes of advantages to be gained by the loss of our financial credit and commercial standing among the nations of the world.

OUR PEOPLE ARE ISOLATED

From all others and if the question of our currency could be treated without regard to our relations to other countries, its character would be a matter of comparative indifference.

American people were only concerned in the maintenance of their physical life among themselves they might return to the old days of harter, and in this primitive manner acquire from each other the materials to supply the wants of their existence. But if American civilization and its products were to be suddenly cast adrift in its high and noble mission.

In these restless days the farmer is tempted by the snare that, though our currency may be debased, redundant and uncertain, such a situation will improve the price of his products. Let us remind him that he cannot pay as well as sell; that his products and profits are shaded by the uncertainty of the value of the things he has to sell in normally enhanced the cost of the things he must buy will not remain stationary; that the better prices which cheap money proclaims are untrustworthy and elusive, and that when they are real and palpable he will be compelled to sell far below in the race for the employment.

It ought not to be difficult to convince the wage earner that if there were benefits arising from a degenerated currency, they would reach the least of all and last of all. In an unhealthy stimulation of prices the ignorant and the unwise, the poor and the improvident, the men of mind and body the men of the world, the men of the unusual, pernicious habits, contracted the disease of the country. Such habits result in a debased currency, which is a curse, produces the constipation and sometimes paralysis of the brain, epilepsy, paralysis, insanity, and death.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunate persons, the author of this article, the publisher of a book written in plain and choice language, on the nature, causes and cures of the disease, and the means of such diseases. This book will be sold at 10 cents a stamp, for postage. Andrew W. Dyer, "American Medical Association," 60 Main St., Butler, Pa.

AN INSURABLE ATTEMPT

Is made to create a prejudicial against the advocates of the sound and sound currency by the publication, more or less directly made, that they belong to financial and business classes and are therefore not out of sympathy with the common people of the land, but for selfish and wicked purposes are willing to sacrifice the interests of those outside their circle.

I believe that capital and wealth, through combination and other means, sometimes gain an undue advantage, and it must be conceded that the middle class, the middle income, in a sense, be invested with a greater or less importance to individuals, according to their condition and circumstances. It is, however, only a difference in degree, since it is utterly impossible that any one in our broad land, rich or poor, whatever may be his condition, is not a factor in the making of a career of finance and commerce or in a remote corner of our domain, can be really benefited by a financial scheme, not alike beneficial to all one people, or that any one should be excluded from a common and universal interest in the safe character and stable value of the currency of the country.

In our opinion this question

WE ARE IN BUSINESS.

For we are not a class who will have to do financial operations for we do all our money and spend it. We cannot escape our independence. Merchants and dealers are in every neighborhood and each has its shops and manufacture. Wherever the wants of man exist, business and finance in some degree are known related in one way or another to the people and in another to the most extensive business and finance to which they are tributary. A fluctuation in prices at the seaboard is known in the same day or hour, in the remotest hamlet.

The discredit or depreciation in the financial centers may form of itself a signal of immediate loss everywhere. Who likes to have his business and wild experiment should sweep our currency from its safe support, and the most disastrous of all misfortune will be the poor, as they reckon the loss in their scanty supplies.

Let us hope that the man who has been deceived by his oil shark and shiver in his hand when he is done for that the necessities to supply his home

"We believe the restoration of silver is necessary for the welfare of our country, and, so believing, no abuse from sources, however high or arrogant, will deter us from our purpose."

silver demonization will not be endured longer without a struggle, the like of which the country has not seen since the civil war. Mr. Cleveland says if the sound money sentiment abroad in the land is to save us from mischief and disaster, it must be crystallized and combined and made immediate.

Mr. Cleveland's argument is that this crystallization and combination of the gold standard sentiment and methods has brought disorder to the people of all gold-standard countries, and this policy is now running this country. It is this state of things that has made his administration a failure, and the masses of the people are suffering.

"Mr. Cleveland suggests that the people are in an unfortunate condition. Certainly they are, and this condition was predicted to happen as a result of his unrelenting war on silver as money. His argument is that the silver standard restoration will be of wicked and unpatriotic purposes may do for those where environments are such as to prevent them from seeing and knowing the utter poverty and distress that is prevailing among the masses of the people but those who live in the midst of the masses of the people are daily that the people are suffering will repel with scorn such insinuations.

"We believe the restoration of silver is necessary for the welfare of our country, and, so believing, no abuse from sources, however high or arrogant, will deter us from our purpose."

THE PRESS.

New York, April 15.—Following are editorial comments from New York and Brooklyn upon President Cleveland's letter to Chicago citizens giving the views of the Executive upon the financial question:

COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.

Two years ago Mr. Cleveland was busy setting the poor man, with his multitudinous woes, against the rich and, and combining force with wealth in such a way as to make him a signal of immediate loss everywhere. Who likes to have his business and wild experiment should sweep our currency from its safe support, and the most disastrous of all misfortune will be the poor, as they reckon the loss in their scanty supplies.

The strength of the letter is in the fact that it appeals to the common sense of the country, irrespective of politics.

EDINBURGH POST.

Mr. Cleveland is undoubtedly correct in maintaining that this silver question needs only to be argued out before the people in order to be settled right.

EVENING POST.

The President has sprung to the front in the cause of a gold standard, and at the head of the moneyed and financial interests of the country, and especially of the east, will battle again silver.

Perhaps the most important of the remaining schemes that, however clichéd, mean disaster and confusion, not that they will consent, by undermining the foundation of a safe currency, to endanger the beneficial character and purpose of their Government.

Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

COMMENT.

Cleveland's Letter Giving His Views on the Financial Question.

Editorial Expressions in the Leading Newspapers, Some Scathing Words by Hon. H. P. Bland.

The Gold Standard Good for Holders and Bankers, Not the Sufferers of

The Industrial Classes Due to the Demonization of Silver.

LEAVENWORTH, Mo., April 15.—Hon. H. P. Bland has seen his name at noon in the salient features of the President's letter. He perused the telegram containing the President's words very attentively, and said: "Mr. Cleveland says the fine of battle is drawn between the friends of a safe currency and those of silver, monometalism, that is, the free coinage of gold and silver, and gold monometalism; in doing so he has focused upon the country a state of affairs that is intolerable to the masses of our people, and that is the reason he has said it is a terrible word of ours."

ADVERTISER.

The Advertiser to-morrow will editorially: Mr. Cleveland has not materially strengthened the cause of sound money. He cannot be permitted to misrepresent as a consistent champion of sound money. In so far as he has opposed the silver craze he deserves credit, but he has distinctly countenanced the equally dangerous plan of an irredeemable fiat bank currency.

CLEVELAND PLAINDEALER.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 15.—The Plain Dealer (Democrat) will say editorially to-morrow:

"The letter of President Cleveland is no better than the bright example of a man who has not only been a good man, but a good man for his party and his country from the beginning of his administration drew the line sharply between the friends of bimetallism and gold monometalism; in doing so he has focused upon the country a state of affairs that is intolerable to the masses of our people, and that is the reason he has said it is a terrible word of ours."

ADVERTISER.

The Advertiser to-morrow will say: "The President declined the invitation in a letter that will probably come some time as a campaign document, and one that must appeal to every possessor of common sense."

ADVERTISER.

The Advertiser to-morrow will say: "The President declined in his epistle that the need of the hour was a plain and simple presentation of the argument in favor of sound money. His letter has a laudable done away with that need, for one such argument is now before the American people."

WASHINGTON STAR.

Washington, April 15.—The Evening Star says: "The President declined the invitation in a letter that will probably come some time as a campaign document, and one that must appeal to every possessor of common sense."

ADVERTISER.

The Advertiser to-morrow will say: "The President certainly does not lack the courage of his convictions on the subject of sound money, and the masses of the people are fully in agreement with him. The question is, does the public need to be educated in the matter, and is it the same time wise and有益的 to do so?"

PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN.

Philadelphia, April 15.—The Evening Bulletin says: "Mr. Cleveland's letter to the citizens of Chicago is a good one, and it is well written. The bold stand which Mr. Cleveland has taken may possibly bring him to the front as a candidate in 1896 for the Democratic nomination on the gold and silver platform.

IT'S A MILLSTONE.

About a young man's neck to be a burden from mere want of money, and the want of money, impairs his health, impairs his spirits, irritates his temper, and the thousand other ills that are the result of such an unnatural, pernicious habit, contracted through ignorance.

Such habits result in a debased currency, which is a curse, produces the constipation and sometimes paralysis of the brain, epilepsy, paralysis, insanity, and death.

Call in Another Physician.

Mr. Cleveland's letter to the Chicago gold monetarists is full of cautions warning against the free coinage of silver, but contains no statement of any plan of financial relief that he advocates.

Mr. Carroll, Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of Kentucky, says it will be free silver. He thinks it will be made an issue in the State campaign.

Business which have gone out that there was small-pox in this city and at Hardsburg is without foundation. If there is a case of small-pox in the county we have not heard of it.

As to whether the government will be able to collect the income tax seems to be an unmet question. The matter is before the Supreme Court of the United States as to the constitutionality of the act.

There have a dull appearance about the town now, but in the country everything is as the move. Farmers are out at the crack of day and shooting at pigeons and other birds during the morning, and the shooting has not been for many a day. The Lord is being willing better times will come with the gathering of the harvest.

Four members of the next United States Senate are Populists and it is said will hold the balance of power in that tribunal. Neither Democrats or Republicans have a clear majority and in order for either to carry a point they must call on the other to help. That's a good deal for a party which has had so little following in this country, but it seems to be a fact.

The Republicans of this country are unanimous for W. O. Bradley, for Governor. The Democrats want Watt Hardin and so it goes. Politics now mean something in old Kentucky. We are willing to confess that it is not all one-sided, but Billy O. Bradley when he gets the gubernatorial nomination, will not find it easy sailing with the gilded statesman, P. Watt Hardin.

Cliff Haddock and Jim Finch, the former a Democrat and the latter a Republican, are the leaders of the efforts of the Cullen Hill neighborhood and enthusiastic silver men told the News the other day that eight men out of ten in that section were for free silver. And we find this to be true of nearly every section in the country.

Hon. Joe C. S. Blackburn has come out flat-footed for free silver. Mr. Blackburn is a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate and he is not afraid to express his opinions. He has been with the like of the hour. Mr. Blackburn's opinions may not be in harmony with the gold bugs and a number of politicians who are looking out for the popular side, but he is in harmony with the great body of his constituents and that counts for something.

The Democrats of this county had enough last November to warn them of the dangers in the future. When a man like Mr. H. H. Moore, the most popular man in the county, and the most popular man in the state, goes into the demagogic party of the party at this time indicates weakness in the cause. A call will be made next month for some precious and distasteful meetings and in response thereto it behoves every member of the party to turn out.

The great International Cotton Exposition which is to be held at Atlanta, Georgia, this year will hardly fall second in importance to the World's fair of 1863. Atlanta is a typical Southern city and her growth and the best of her work will be the envy of the world. The men of the commercial world are upon her now to see how she will manage this great exposition. Times are close, but her citizens are using their energy and zeal necessary to make a success of their great undertaking.

There was a call made in last week's issue of the News, for a meeting of the physicians of the county for the purpose of organizing a county Association. This is a move in the right direction, and the News hope to see the physicians of the county come together for the protection and good for the people. The physicians of Meade county have a similar organization and it is in a fine working order. They meet once a month, discuss questions relative to their practice and read papers on subjects of interest to the profession.

Dick Neveit the clever County Clerk of Meade made a very speech before the Board of Education last week in defense of the use of the court-house for a musical to be given by Mrs. Grinnell, the News' correspondent, and her pupils. His speech was to the point and highly complimentary, and the audience was greatly gratified by the News, who is pleased to know that it has on its staff of correspondents so good, pure, and patriotic a man as Dick Neveit, who is always in touch with the community which she represents.

by local applications, as they cannot redress the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.

Deafness is a disease and in the condition of the mucous membranes of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless this inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its proper condition, hearing will be destroyed forever.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Leads a Storming Party and Captures Toulon.

RAISED TO GENERAL OF BRIGADE

Chief of Artillery In the Army of Italy. Sent to Negotiate With the Genoese. Falls Under Suspicion and Is Arrested.

AGAIN DEPOSED FROM RANK.

(Copyright, 1850, by John Clark Bidwell.)

VIII.—EMERGENCY.

For Napoleon, Tonon was the open gate to greatness. His "destiny," for which he sought so diligently, came to him when he was in command of the battery there. Those guns were trained first on Fort L'Égénite, and then on the British ships, and Admiral Hood, a ship of the line, the "Royal Sovereign," which, after four years and seven months, we shall embark for Egypt, are put up in a nook of the harbor. Over the town of Toulon, the French batteries, like the banner of St. George, The Lily flag of the Bourbons have given place, not to the new Tricolor of the Revolution, but to the former colors of a few regiments who are rallied to the Royalists of Tonon. It is to be noted that the first and the last of Napoleon's guns are directed against the flag of England. From Toulon to Waterford, this line of space of twenty-four years and six months—filled with the wreck and transformation of the world!

Here, in the great red begin, a division of the French National army has been sent to retake the traitorous town. The commanders are General Doppel, who from a doctor has risen to this fighting position; Dugommier, and Dugommier, an officer who, fourteen years ago, was with Lafayette in our American army of Independence. Other officers are to be found in the subordinate commands; and here also are several representatives from the National Convention.

The men, under orders of that body, are dashing hither and thither and like arrows to sting whosoever shall be unfeastful to the Revolution. Some fly to the field of Valmy, where, in the words of Argenson, they are to be found in the air with their swords. Others are on the track of Dunkerque, toward Belgium and the Netherlands, where he struggles to drive back the English. Some are to be found with Captain Barras himself, and all others here in Tonon, watching everything, and making final report of every blunder. Hitler has come Barras himself, and

The following testimonial comes from T. M. Fogg, Esq., who is well known throughout the country as a man of great knowledge and justice of the peace for his country. His words are as follows:

COPRIGHT, 1894. BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION.

"I listen for some suggestion from you." "I can think of none except, with your permission, to enter a protest over the signature of our commanding officers of highest rank."

"It would be something."

"There is nothing to save her from this sacrifice, which, though she always been prepared for it, and doubtless will now meet it with a manly courage, she is, with becoming fortitude, is still hard for those of us who love and respect her to bear. We will never her as a martyr to a cause."

During the dialogue, Maynard sat on his horse without any movement and spoke in measured, formal, automatic tones. Maynard's words were quicker than Pitt Hinch's, which had to be read or faintly heard in the confusion in the south. After the last sentence spoken by Pitt Hinch there was a long silence. They had met for a purpose. Their meeting had been a success.

It seemed to both that they could hear their watches ticking away the seconds that lay between Caroline Pitt Hinch and death. It was the small hours of the morning. It will be, it is at all, but four sunrise."

"What do you propose to do?"

"What I propose to do, neither you nor your sister shall know till it has been accomplished."

"We will remain here or near by, and at 4 o'clock you will find me where I now am."

"Alive," cried Maynard as he turned his horse's head and galloped away.

"Alive," he called back. It was in the state of mind to which he was accustomed, and raised his hat as politely as if he were saluting in a barracks.

Pitt Hinch rejoined his companion and rode away in the direction of Ringold, and Maynard followed him. Maynard's brain was in a fever. Time had been expended to no gain. The small hours came on, and only six of them had passed before he had the strength to ride back to his place. He formed his resolve. Whether wise, foolish, right or wrong, practical or impulsive, he did not care.

Once more he turned his horse and spurred his horse on without thought of obstacle. Turning from the rough ground on which he rode, he was about to cross the stream, when he was overtaken, shot in the back, and nearly starved by the firing of a bullet and the sound that came with it. Throbbing close to his ear, almost bursting his temples.

Knowing that he had by his carelessness suddenly come upon a Union depot, he called out,

"Come in, Private!"

In answer to a call to advance Ratigan rode forward and found a vedette, who had mistaken them for an enemy. On making themselves known, the two suffered a pass over. Maynard, fearing that he was too incendiary to lead, gave way to Ratigan. They proceeded on their way in more caution and passed the gap in the ridge leading to Reel's bridge.

The good footing of the road enabled them, after getting into a running race, to cover rapidly. After they had passed the ridge they left the road and turned eastward. Soon after they reached camp.

CHAPTER XIX.

IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

Once inside his tent Colonel Maynard said,

"Corporal, I want you to get me the uniform of a private soldier. You must do so without exciting suspicion."

"I don't know how O'H'll do it, Colonel. I must gain back to my own camp."

"I fear that will take too long. Can't you steal one from one of the tents near by?"

"O'H might be able to do it, and O'H might spend the whole night trying. O'H can get me one in camp certain."

"I would take your jacket, but I wanted to keep it. That's the only other way but for you to go to your camp."

"Colonel, O'H ride hard."

"Ride, and remember that every moment is worth a thousand other times."

Ratigan left on his loping gallop and was soon galloping on his way. Once out of the camp from which he started he found no general to pass and was alone. He was a good rider, however, and the night before he had chased the woman whom he had then had to let be. Higgs in a mad race to capture her. Now he was waiting, in the darkness, for the announcement of his capture. Past woods and waters flew the corporal, over bridges and hills, through hollows and rivets, till he came to his own camp. There he at once sought the quarters of Private Planagan.

"Planagan," he cried, shaking the private. "You want?"

"What's the corporal?"

"Let me take your clothes and ask no questions."

"Take 'em. And dirrl a question if it's ask except what do we want 'em for?"

Ratigan seized the bundle, and, with an injunction to Planagan to keep his mouth shut, he went to a nearby house and was again riding over the ground back to Colonel Maynard's headquarters.

It was now the small hours of the night. The corporal cast his eye to the east and saw a faint streak of white light there. Digging his spurs into his beast's flanks and urging him with his voice, he urged his horse and sped on a race between life and death.

"Go on, ye beast!" cried the corporal. "Go on, me darlin'. Stretch yer

"Oh know those who will rejoice."

Ratigan now took the lead, having passed over the road before several crossed legs, for I don't care if ye kill us if we live no time. What's yer life compared with hers?" On with, on with me beauty! Win the race with the man it is about, light there, and O'H will help yo forever."

With such contradiction and incoher- phrases Ratigan urged his horse to the limit. He would go no further. Again he stopped, the water, and then, flying by tilt at last the corporal dismounted at the camp he rode for, and in a moment went to Colonel Maynard.

The corporal sat back. A man and O'H would go no further.

Miss Maud Hugus of Louisville, to make her an extended visit soon.

Why can't we have a Sunday school?

So many children whiling away the Sabbath in idleness, learning nothing that will benefit them in this life or the life to come. Parents think of it, the reason is that they don't know it.

Young Washington will have every day or two the olive-silver sunlight and the gold standard idea is silvanizing in the West. Are the fellows who send out such stuffs to blame? The sentiment in favor of honest money is steadily growing in the West, but the honest money must be a money which won't rob the man in the den of all he has, as old standard gold does.

FACE TO FACE.

This lesson we learned in life's school, where I've been for years on apt scholar.

It's better to take the adven of most men than to do what your friends tell you to do.

Wish to go to church without pray.

Wish to go to the preacher the devil with house with us.

The devil will promise to pay any kind of interest if we will only take him.

Unbelief is the egg out of which all sins are hatched.

No gift can be put on God's altar unless the blood of religious life is given.

Put the blood of religious life is given.
